asked by a correspondent of THE about the outlook in his district. He sphed:

My district is in good shape, and, so far a the result is concerned, I am indifferent thether I have opposition or not. I have one yet. Personally, I would rather have prosition, for it would throw life into the savass and insure a full Democratic vote; rid, besides, nothing so conduces to the heelpliee of an army or a party as to be obstantly confronted by an active foe.

and, besides, nothing so conduces to the decipline of an army or a party as to be constantly confronted by an active foe.

I feel sure the Democratic party will have many accessions to its ranks in the district in the coming election. The discussion of the tariff, the defeat of the free coinage of silver, the insincerity of the Republican party in failing to keep its solemn pledges to pass the Blair Educational bill and repeal the tobacco tax, the passage of the Dependent Pension bill, the squandering of the large surplus in the Treasury left by the Democratic administration, and the attempt upon the part of Reed and other malignant South-haters to turn us back for twenty years, paralyze our industries and drive capital from our borders will bring to us many conservative Republicans.

Will the Republican party be held responsible for all these things, Colonel?

Why, of course. It was solid against the reduction of tariff; it was virtually solid against the free coinage of silver. Holding both branches of Congress, it could readily have passed the Blair bill and have repealed the tax on tobacco. It orginated and passed through the House the iniquitous Force bill.

What effect will the Fai.ners' Alliance have upon the political parties?

Well, the Farmers' Allian' e, as I understand, is non-partisan, but it is not, of course, non-political, for the very questions with which it proposes to deal are political questions. I have read with much interest the Alliance platform adopted at Lynchburg last week, and its principles are Democratic, and I infer, of course, that its members will vote for the Democratic party as the party representing the principles for which they are contending.

teralize, but that has not deterred him from making a vigorous campaign in his district. He has everything to commend Ifim to the voters of the Seventh, and his gallant leader-ship in the closing hours of Congress prove that he is too valuable a representative of Virginia to be missed at this term from the

EIGHTH DISTRICT.

General W. H. F. Lee's Strong Fight Against Hume.

Against Hume.

The Eighth Congressional district embraces the counties of Alexandria, Culpoper, Fairfax, Fanquier, King George, Loudoun, Louisa, Orange and Stafford, the city of Alexandria, and the towns of Lecsburg, Warrenton, Culpoper, and Manassas.

The total vote in an eff year does not exceed 15,200, $500 of which are generally conceded Democratic.

For the past two terms General William Henry Fitzhugh Lee, of Fairfax, has represented the district in Congress, and has been an able, active and honest servant of its people, and a very worthy successor of John S. Barbour and Eppa Hunton.

GENERAL W. H. F. LEE.

General Lee not only won glory in the service of his State during the war, but since then has been a man of affairs, being a practical farmer and having had an opportunity as president of the State Agricultural Society, as Senator in the General Assembly, and as twice elected member of the House of Representatives, to become thoroughly familiar with the various details of legislation, both State and national. He has a large personal following and many devoted friends in all parts of Virginia. He asked for another term, and the regular Democrats nominated him in the August convention at Leesburg accordingly, and by acclamation, of course.

General Lee's opponent is Mr. Frank Hume, of Alexandria county, at present representative of the city and county to the House of Delegates, and he is out as "an unpledged independent Democrat"—he having refused to go into the convention of this year, giving for his reasons some methods of the Stafford chairman, and since announcing himself has been endorsed by the regular Republicans. The situation appears complex, and more so than in even some of the old Whig days, when politics of this section were of the good old-fashioned Virginia sort—honorable to everybody with a vote.

Among the negroes there is an indiffer-hannel.

THE VIRGINIA CAMPAIGN.

ss much if hot more for his constituents than he could, and from advices from all through the district he believes General Lee to be safe. Mr. Meredith, who has also been through the district, says the General is all right, and General Eppa Hunton says he will have no trouble in carrying the district by an increased majority.

Concentration Against Hon. John A. Bu chanan returned from Congress and began his canvass in the Ninth district he said to a correspondent of The Times:

The Democratic party in the Ninth district is in good condition. Congressional legislation during this Congress has greatly strengthened the party. The great body of the people are opposed to the increase of the Tariff or tax in the McKinley bill; to the Bankrupt bill with its unjust provisions; the Lodge Force bill, which interferes with local self-government, with its other unjust and infamous provisions, is objected to by almost, if not by all of the people, no matter to which party they belong. They know that it is a blow at the investment of Northern capital and the rapid development of that section, whether so intended or not; that it is a reckless partisan measure for which there is no hecessity and which can only do injury to the South and all of its interests. Republican extravagance by which the surplus in the Federal Treasurer in being reduced instead of by a reduction of taxes, is doing its work in forming public opinion favorable to the Democratic party.

The failure, or rather the refusal, to pass the Blair bill, or to repeal the internal revenue tax on tobacco, has disgusted many Republicans, who believed the Republican promises on those subjects.

The Farmers' Alliance is strong and numerous in many counties, and its teachings upon most subjects are antagonistic to the views of the Republican party, and this will strengthen the Democrats. The Southwest, in a word, has a great future, and its people only wish an equal chance, and no sectional or class legislation, and they wish a party in power that will so govern.

HON. JOHN A. BUCHANAN.

That was said before George Mills, late of Pennsylvania, was announced as a caudidate of monoplists. The feeling against Mills is not so strong because he is not a native of the State, but because he has failed to appreciate the spirit of his surroundings. It is claimed by the Rockingham Register, for instance, that, "possing as a friend of American labor through the instrumentality of the great American system of "protection," he has imported Hungarians and Poles into his district, and utilized their foreign pauper labor in the furtherance of his railroad projects, thereby displacing honest, native-born American labor, both white and black."

Against him stands Buchanan. If his other well-known qualities of mind and tion of the people is safe.

In the last few days J. D. Robinett has announced himself as a candidate against Mr. Buchanan, but as there is no logical reason for such a position, Mr. Buchanan's friends see in it only additional incentive to satisfie.

It is conceeded by everybody, even his political enemies, that the most vigorous, thorough and masterly speech against the Force bill made on the floor of Congress was by Mr. Tucker. He not only spoke against it, but voted against it, and the people of the Fenth district are determined that he shall be returned to Congress so that he may continue his resistance to the 'party which fathered that bill of iniquity.

In his district, A. J. Taylor, as an alleged from their former political affiliations and using their best energies against a party which has shown to what lengths it would go against the South. Congressman Tucker is well able to expound and denounce the latest phase of this South-hating Radicalism, and he is doing so with such vigor as to lead his supporters to believe that his majority will be greater than the 503 votes of 1888.

Medieval Economics.

[New York World.]

The senior organ of protection in this city certainly has the courage of its folly when it confesses that "the precise object" of the new tariff law is the "restriction of trade."

How far back into medieval darkness does this carry us? The cities of Europe once surrounded themselves with walls that they might tax to death the outside merchant whose hardihood and commercial spirit brought him to the gates. The laws of Epirus condemned the Syracusan who dared to trade within their jurisdiction. But for conturies it has been the accepted belief of enlightened men that civilization advanced with trade and that commerce promoted peace. England and France are great because of their commerce. The wonderful prosperity of the United States is coeval with her importance as a trading country. The protective tariff was first established in order that we might stand on an oqual footing with the great European powers in the world's market.

It is passing strange, when Mr. Blaine is urging that the manufacturers shall have a wider market in Latin-America, that the medieval spirit should cry out against trade, in the newpaper which was once his principal organ. Modern protectionism has no truer exponent than the Tribune.
